

Reflection for Rits Super Global Forum 2015

Yu – Han Chen , KGHS

Before I joined this forum, I didn't expect my joining this forum would result in such cherished memories. The biggest reason is because I thought my English was too bad to communicate with lots of foreign students, and it would have been difficult for me to learn something from them or even make friends with them. Sometime, I would think that why I had to join this activity of social science, which I was not major in. However, after the forum ending, the experience during it did change my mind.

In this forum, I decided to pick Gender as my topic. Gender discrimination is a serious issue around the world. This is a problem not only in developing countries but developed ones. The biggest reason that causes gender gap is that few men understand and practice gender equality, and even some women themselves don't know how serious the discrimination they are facing. Although some typical reasons that cause gender gap such as religions, social norms, and marriage cultures, are also significant problems, this reason is the most important problem that needs everyone to think out ways to solve and practice gender equality.

When we arrived at Rits High School, at first, I was very nervous. I worried that I wouldn't understand what other students were talking about while they were talking to me. Also, I was afraid that my teammates would feel disappointed because of my insufficient preparation for our topic, Gender. During the time of poster presentation, I tried to introduce our poster to the others. I was frustrated since my introduction was neither fluent nor clear. While we were having group-based discussion, all of my teammates were very kind and friendly. They gave my confident and made me feel more at ease. Also, because of their encouragement, I worked harder to think out more ideas and search for more and more data and information for our topic. Though in the end we couldn't own the opportunity to be the group that presented our research to everyone, we still had learned a lot and had a great cooperation.

The most excited part for me must be the panel discussion. Being one of the students that sat on the stage is really an honor. It was truly a great chance to learn something that we had not realize before, and to practice our English speaking, listening, and even writing skills. For me, the activity was just like an easier English debate. I had to share what we had learned about our topic during these several days, and answer other students' questions. Though I had already tried my best, it was still a big challenge for me to answer other students, especially from Singapore and India. Their accents were too hard to understand! Although I felt quite embarrassed during the panel discussion, this is a very special experience for me. I really thanked a lot for all the other students and the two teachers from KGHS and KSHS's help and encouragement! Thank you so much!

The most funny part for me must be the cultural performance. In this activity, we could share our countries' special cultures and show our talents on the stage. Every students was so talented! And we could see that all the students put lots of effort in preparing for it. I also want to thank all the students from KGHS. It was our hard work and our cooperation that made our performance successful.

This was truly the first time for me to meet so many foreign students from different countries, and I'm so excited to own the opportunity to discuss about the gender equality and world peace.

All the students are very nice and adorable, I really thank a lot for everything you helped me and the joy and happiness you gave me. This forum really made me learn a lot, because of it, I realized some reasons that cause gender discrimination and I had not learned it before. It is such a memorable activity that we won't forget. I will really miss these fantastic days and all of you. I hope that we can have chances to meet each other in the future.
